I am confused what the definition of
"Limited Purpose Evidence" is?

"Limited purpose evidence" is ~~the~~ evidence you may consider as proof of one thing, but not for another thing. There was only one instance of limited purpose evidence in the case.

The defendant testified that a witness told him about the effectiveness of Subsys. I instructed you that you ~~were~~ could consider that testimony as some proof of the defendant's understanding of the effectiveness of Subsys. But I told you ^{that} you could not consider that testimony as proof of the actual effectiveness of Subsys. This is an example of evidence admitted for a "limited purpose."
